

MS-406 Frigidaire TOM (Tired Old Men) Club Records

Collection Number: MS-406.

Title: Frigidaire TOM (Tired Old Men) Club Records.

Dates: 1916-2008 (Bulk 1950s-1970s).

Abstract:

This collection consists of assorted photographs, documents, publications, and memorabilia, collected by former employees of the Frigidaire Corporation. Within are numerous photographs showing different interesting aspects of early founders and employees, as well as many motivational get-togethers. Included also are a number of technical manuals and training aids, demonstrating the business end of the company.

Creator: Members of the TOM Club and consolidated by Gailard “Red” Ketcham.

Physical Description: 7.1 linear feet, 722 photographs.

Language: English.

Repository:

Special Collections and Archives, Paul Laurence Dunbar Library, Wright State University, Dayton, OH 45435-001, (937)775-2092.

Restrictions on Access: There are no restrictions on accessing material in this collection.

Restrictions on Use:

Copyright restrictions may apply. Unpublished manuscripts are protected by copyright. Permission to publish, quote, or reproduce must be secured from the repository and the copyright holder.

Preferred Citation:

(Box Number, Folder Number), MS-406, Frigidaire TOM (Tired Old Men) Club Records, Special Collections and Archives, University Libraries, Wright State University, Dayton, Ohio.

Acquisition:

The collection was donated by Gailard “Red” Ketcham and the TOM Club in 2008 with more items added to the collection in 2009.

Accruals: It is possible that other materials will be added to this collection at a later date.

Separated Material:

Items that are part of this collection, but separated from it include three-dimensional memorabilia and a framed poster of the flag raising at Iwo Jima. Some items have also been separated from documents that they were associated with when the collection was donated. These can be readily found, in that organizational groupings will have the same names. Paul Nozar's scrapbook included both documents, (box 1, files 6-11), and photographs, (box 12, file 23). Red Ketcham's Frigidaire Story, (box 1, files 1-6), included a PowerPoint presentation, (box 12, file 3).

Physical Characteristics and Technical Requirements:

The collection includes thirteen sound recordings that will require specific media players. These include phonograph records, audiocassette tapes, and DVD and CD disks.

Related Material: MS-262, Frigidaire Historical Collection.

Additional Sources:

The Frigidaire Collection, Richard P. Sarchburg Archives, Kettering University, Flint, MI.

Note:

Photographs have all been grouped together, as have technical manuals. Some items obviously needed to be kept in the order in which they were received, the scrapbooks are a good example. All of the retirement photographs, (box 9), are organized chronologically. This was done because the subject matter revolved around retirement parties, often with multiple individuals being honored at the same event. This led to one odd grouping where Al Lane is listed twice (files 21 and 23). The first was his luncheon, and the second, the party itself.

Processing Information:

Wherever possible, the processor maintained organization from clues within the material, for instance, a folder containing several photographs. Some obviously related materials were often randomly scattered throughout the collection, and these were filed with similar items.

Historical Note:

The Tired Old Men (TOM) club is a group of several hundred retired Frigidaire employees and supervisors who meet monthly and keep in touch with one-another. They saved and accumulated numerous photographs, sound recordings, documents, and other memorabilia.

Frigidaire formed in 1916 as the Guardian Refrigerator Company and merged with Delco-Light to become Frigidaire Corporation in 1926. It then became part of General Motors Corporation in 1933. During the Second World War, Frigidaire retooled their manufacturing plants to support the war effort, building machine guns and propellers. By the 1950s, Frigidaire was producing refrigerators, freezers, air conditioners, washers, dryers, electric stoves and ovens. In 1979, the company was sold to White Consolidated Industries and again to Electrolux in 1986, which ended all production.

Scope and Content:

This collection spans more than 90 years worth of Frigidaire history as collected and preserved by members of the Tired Old Men Club. The material is divided into series and subseries, and then further arranged into major groupings to aid in quickly locating relevant documents.

Series I contains various technical manuals and service guides, the bulk of which date from the 1950s through 1970s. While it does not appear to form a complete collection, it is substantial. There are also a few interesting legal documents, such as the merger agreement of Delco and Frigidaire (box 1, files 7, 8). These types of documents are fairly rare within the collection, however. The employee news publications contain a wealth of information about the company, the employees, and the company's culture (box 8, files 1-42). The three main periodicals were the Frigidaire Bulletin, the Frigidairian, and the Mast.

Series II has a significant number of photographs of large groups from the 1920s through the 1970s, with the preponderance of these in the 1950s and 1960s. Other major groupings of photographs show company Christmas and retirement parties, but other social and business activities are also in evidence. Included too are various aspects of the business and manufactured items.

Series III houses audio recordings that show how the company used another medium of communication. Many of the phonograph albums and cassette tapes are radio advertisements, some are career motivational pieces, and one, "The Frigidaire Man," promotes company pride.

Frigidaire played an important role in the war effort of the 1940s. While the collection offers some information about this valuable function, it does not mention many of the manufacturing specifics of how the assembly lines were retooled. However, information is included on the quantity of Browning .30 caliber machineguns, and three- and four-blade propellers shipped.
